

Managing difficult times

Respond with non-aversive techniques that help students to manage their actions until they can be more receptive.

1: Make changes around the things that set off such reactions

- Remove objects that may distract the student.
- Change the time, location, or duration of activities if these factors are viewed as influencing difficult behaviour.
- Redirect the student to another activity they enjoy.
- Remove unnecessary demands or requests.
- Change where the student sits.
- If the student is taking medication, check that it has been given/taken when it is required.

2: Interrupt the build-up

- Move closer or move away as appropriate, stand side on rather than face-on.
- Give instructions that the student is more likely to follow.
- Remind them of any self-management strategies they know.
- Cue them to take a break or to monitor and recognise the beginning of a build-up.
- Facilitate relaxation.
- If the student is taking medication, check (in private) if medication was taken.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.
