Identify and remove barriers

Ensure the environment is designed to allow the child to flourish.

Tūngia te ururua kia tupu whakaritorito te tupu o te harakeke.

Clear away the overgrowing bush so that the new flax shoots will spring up.

Make decisions together

Take a responsive, timely approach guided by whānau.

Coordinate who whānau want at the table.

Make all decisions with them.

Examples of approaches to support planning

There are many models and approaches for developing a learner support plan.

Choose an approach that motivates and preserves the mana of ākonga and their whānau.

- ✓ Te Aho Matua – information to explain Individual Education Plan (IEP), Te Aho Matua (TAM), and Mahere Mātauranga Motuhake (MMM) – holistic plan that encompasses the whole being of an ākonga, language, socialisation, whakapapa, and potential

Reflection questions

Innovative solutions can stem from a pool of shared meaning.

Foster this by exchanging experiences and stories with whānau and having genuine respect.

Prior to developing a plan with whānau, consider:

- protocols – creating space and time for karakia, mihi, and opportunities to make connections with whānau
- sharing why developing a plan is important and inviting whānau to be a part
- the approach that will promote meaningful discussion and mutual decision making
- building on what is working for the learner
- the resources that will support the learner and their whānau
- what to do when challenges arise and how might they be addressed
- how you can genuinely support the learner and their whānau in the plan.
