Strengthen student agency

When it comes to supporting students to take ownership of their learning, one way will not work for everyone.

Provide a range of useful thinking and sharing opportunities to identify what is working well and where more support would be helpful.

Create environments that foster and value ākonga voice.

Consider how you can:

- support students to understand how they learn, encouraging positive learning habits
- match teaching methods to student preferences
- provide flexibility in topic and content choices
- encourage students to develop their own learner profile
- provide a range of tools and materials so that learners can share and create in a way that works for them
- seek regular feedback to inform lesson design
- encourage student input across planning spaces
- ask learners to share what strategies or resources they find useful or not useful.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.