Build capability with coaching

Coaching is a collaborative process that builds teacher capability by focussing on the needs and next steps of each teacher.

Teaching is a complex craft, and teachers are simultaneously curriculum developers, content experts, pedagogues, social workers, psychologists, mentors and motivators... Coaching is likely to be effective because it is purposefully differentiated. Much like effective teaching to students, effective coaching purposefully targets each individual teacher's needs.

Recognise and value expertise

- ✓ Investigate the breadth of community expertise, including present and past students, parents and whānau, local agencies.
- ✓ Identify where there are common needs across different classes, areas of the school or across local schools.
- ✓ Identify gaps in your school's collective expertise and possible solutions.
- ✓ Use Learning Support Coordinators, where available, to help teachers to develop capability.
- ✓ Involve Ministry of Education specialists such as RTLB.
