Identify first

Te Tangata: Māori are free from racism, discrimination and stigma. Remove barriers to learning, engagement, and wellbeing so that our mokopuna will flourish.

Tūngia te ururua kia tupu whakaritorito te tupu o te harakeke.

Clear away the overhanging bush so that the new flax shoots will spring up.

Teaching for life

Te Tuakiritanga: Identity, language and culture

Ākonga Māori have a right to know and access their stories, to understand the impact of colonisation, and take action to have their truth heard.

Consider ākonga Maori right to both receive and tell counter-stories to:

- name and expose majoritarian stories, racism, assimilation, colonisation and the trauma it has caused without compromise
- debate forcefully
- research relentlessly
- write powerfully
- speak out fearlessly
- take action to have their truth heard
- be activists?

It is as important for your non-Maori and ākonga Māori alike.

Consider the support you will need to put in place to ensure that ākonga Māori feel safe to speak out.

Understand what matters

Te Whānau: Respond to ākonga Māori within the context of their whānau.

Actions we can take.

Our kaiako:

- know me as an individual, and how I am part of my whānau, hapū, iwi, and community
- treat me, my peers and our whānau fairly and with respect
- respect our culture
- pronounce Māori names well, if not perfectly
- know about the local tikanga
- use te reo Māori as they teach, in hui and in events and encourage us to speak Māori if we want
- make space for us to bring our Māori knowledge to planning and problem solving
- know the value of interdependence. The power of the collective and working together.

Reflective questions

Te Rangatiratanga: Support Māori to exercise their authority and agency.

Consider your responses to these questions.

What actions do they inspire?

How do I support Māori to make decisions about the education of ākongā Māori?

How do I make way and create opportunities for Māori to be Māori?

What actions can I take to deepen my understanding of the history of Aotearoa New Zealand and Te Tiriti o Waitangi?

How do I describe how the Treaty of Waitangi influences my practice?

How do I amplify Māori voice, knowledge, history, and mana in both what I teach and how I teach?

How do I establish and sustain equitable relationships with mana whenua, ākongā Māori, and their whānau?
