

Support for inclusive design

If we are critically conscious as we apply a UDL approach, it can help us to systematically remove barriers to learning for ākongā Māori and increase flexible valued learning pathways.

Te Hurihanganui speaks of the importance of developing critical understandings, through an iterative research and design process that respects and is inclusive of diversity and innovation.

Universal Design for Learning is a people-first framework that helps us plan for diversity. UDL is applied through a thinking cycle that helps us identify and remove barriers to learning and supports the development of inclusive flexible learning environments, rich in supports and options.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.

