

Approaches to progress reporting

Pacific parents expect honest reporting about their child's progress and achievement.

- Use honest and straightforward language to talk about achievement, both areas of success and areas to strengthen.
- Discuss with families ways they can support their child in their learning at home.
- Invite Pacific parents and families into school to see how learning is supported in the classroom.
- Contact parents sooner rather than later when concerns or issues arise regarding their children's education or well-being.
- Regularly contact parents to share their children's achievements.
- Inform parents about celebrations of their children's achievement, especially when their children are receiving awards or certificates at assembly.
