Differing perspectives of inclusion

Parents and family may have different perspectives on disability, inclusion, and accessing learning support for their children.

Take time to understand:

- values and beliefs about disability and inclusion
- personal experiences of learning
- hopes and dreams for their child
- fears and anxieties
- expectations around support for learning.

Build effective partnerships

We are true partners when:

- ✓ you listen to what I have to say
- ✓ you acknowledge my intelligence
- ✓ you want to learn more about my ways
- ✓ you don't judge me
- ✓ you engage me in genuine dialogue
- ✓ we make decisions together
- ✓ you show that my child matters to you
- ✓ you include my experience, knowledge, and viewpoints with yours.

Useful resources

Understanding special education from the perspectives of Pasifika families

Read time: 101 min

This report identifies: the strengths of current service provision, barriers to accessing special education services for Pasifika students; and the extent to which cultural perspectives on disability and special education and the low numbers of Pasifika professionals affect engagement and satisfaction with special education services for Pasifika families.
