

Support student interactions

A student's social development influences how they interact with others. Social contexts and differences (such as ASD or dyslexia) will shape a student's behaviour.

When a student seems uncomfortable in social situations, consider:

- Are the social expectations mismatched to the student's stage of development?
- Have the social expectations been explained in ways the student can understand?
- Do they have the skills, including vocabulary, to participate equitably?
- Have they had opportunities to learn and practise the range of social skills needed in a particular context?

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.

